"Als Ertrag numismatischer Forschungen veröffentlicht T. 1779 einen Traktat, in dem die Unechtheit aller altisraelischen Münzen mit Quadratschrift, aber auch aller hasmonäischen und makkabäischen Prägungen zu beweisen versucht wird. Diese Ansicht wies der spanische Jesuit, Numismatiker Francisco Perez Bayer (1711 - 26.1. 1794), Archidiakonus von Valencia, entschieden zurück, worauf sich eine unerquickliche Polemik entspann, die erst mit der späteren Anerkennung der Echtheit wenigstens einiger Münzen (De numis hebraicis diatribe [1791], s.u.) abebbt." (Klaus-Gunther Wesseling in Biographisch-Bibliographisches Kirchenlexikon, 12, col. 761).

"Christian Hebraist and Orientalist; born at Tondern in Sleswick, Denmark, Dec. 14, 1734; died at Rostock, Germany, Dec. 30, 1815. He studied rabbinics at the University of Halle, and journeyed through Germany and Denmark in the years 1759 and 1760 on a fruitless mission for the conversion of the Jews, giving rise to an unseemly altercation by a conversionist sermon in the Altona synagogue. In the latter year he was called to the newly founded University of Bützow, Mecklenburg, and remained there as professor of Oriental languages till the university ceased to exist (1789), when he became chief librarian and director of the museum at Rostock. Besides many works on Arabic and Syriac archeology and philology, he published "Bützowische Nebenstunden" (6 vols., Wismar, 1766-69), containing a large amount of material regarding the text of the Old Testament, derived mainly from Jewish commentators like Rashi and from the older versions, as the Septuagint and Targum. He claimed the ability to speak "the Talmudic language," and in a special monograph denied the authenticity of the Maccabean and other Jewish coins"(Crawford Howell Toy & Joseph Jacobs at www.JewishEncyclopedia.com).

"In 1794, the theologian and orientalist Oluf Gerhard Tychsen (1734 - 1815) of Rostock published his Introductio in rem numariam muhammedanorum, the first scholarly manual of Islamic numismatics. Tychsen's collection is still part of the university collection in Rostock. His colleague in Göttingen, Thomas Christian Tychsen (1758 - 1834), was able to build up the Oriental holdings of the university collections with the assistance of generous patrons, in particular alumni living in imperial Russia"(Stefan Heidemann, Collections of Oriental Coins in Germany, published in: Oriental Numismatic Society - Newsletter 179 (Spring 2004), p. 5-9).
